

Letter from Editors,

Dear readers of the International Journal of Human and Behavioral Science,

We are excited to be with you with the first issue of the third volume of the IJHB. We would like start with our appreciation to all who contributes to this issue by submitting and reviewing manuscripts. From the date of first publication, the aim of the IJHB is to share recent researches in the area of education, human and behavioral sciences. Our journal has been included in new indexes such as Academic Keys and Turkish Education Index and will be included in more databases soon.

This issue includes Utkun Aydın's research about the relationship between meaning and formalism. Author's purpose is to explore the sources of mathematical ideas in terms of the relationships between meaning and formalism, and their role in the transition between elementary mathematics and advanced mathematics. Results of her study indicated that individuals had different ways in constructing mathematical ideas and that their mathematical ideas were derived from the transition between meaning and formalism. In another article, Gökçe Bulgan and Ayşe Çiftçi critically reviewed the literature on the interplay of work-family life and psychosocial adjustment of married international graduate students to the United States, provided evidence for a complicated and integrated support mechanism for married international graduate students. Authors also included recommendation to the married international students to help them about their adjustment process in United States.

We hope this issue of our journal contribute to the field of education, human, and behavioral sciences. We appreciate to the all who contributed to the preparation process of this issue.
