

Journal of American Studies of Turkey

A semiannual publication of the American Studies Association of Turkey, Journal of American Studies of Turkey is an international journal. It operates with a blind peer referee system. It publishes transdisciplinary work in English by scholars of any nationality on American literature, history, art, music, film, popular culture, institutions, politics, economics, geography, and related subjects. Contributors need not be members of the American Studies Association of Turkey.

Articles which cross conventional borders between academic disciplines are particularly welcome, as are comparative studies of American and other cultures. The journal also publishes notes, comments, book and film reviews. Details about the submission of manuscripts are provided on the back (inside) cover of this issue.

The American Studies Association of Turkey disclaims responsibility for statements, whether of fact or opinion, made by contributors.

The American Studies Association of Turkey was founded in 1988 to promote American Studies in Turkey and where possible to assist Turkish and non-Turkish scholars working in the field. It also aims to further research and publication in Turkish-American comparative studies. Enquiries concerning applications for membership should be addressed to the Office of the Secretary, American Studies Association of Turkey, Cinnah Caddesi 20, TAD Binası Kat 4 Oda 48, Kavaklıdere, Ankara, Turkey.

List of Contributors

MATTEO CACCO

Matteo Cacco is a Postdoc Research Manager at the University of Cologne holding a PhD in Film Studies and American Studies with a thesis on John Fante's Italian American cinema and literature at the University of Rome Tor Vergata in collaboration with the University of Cologne. He has lectured on the relationship between interculturalism and literature, South American magical realism, multiculturalism in John Fante's literature, the relationship between "writers and screenwriters" during the Classical Hollywood, Edward Dmytryk's literary cinema, Pietro Di Donato's social writing and the Italian American writer Pascal D'Angelo.

GIUSEPPE CAPALBO

Giuseppe Capalbo is a PhD student in English Literature at the University of Rome Tor Vergata, Italy. In 2019, he earned a Master's degree – cum laude – in Modern Languages and Literatures from the University of Calabria, Italy. In June 2022, he received a fellowship from the Warburg Institute, University of London, UK, to attend the course Decoding the Renaissance: 500 Years of Codes and Ciphers. He has conducted research on corporeality in contemporary Anglophone fiction at the Bodleian Library, University of Oxford, UK, and presented at national and international conferences. His research interests include representations of the body, fin-de-siècle literature and culture, gender, queer, and spatial literary studies.

CHRISTINE CONTRADA

Christine Contrada earned a PhD in History from Stony Brook University in New York. She teaches Western, World, and American History at Northern Virginia Community College and Germanna Community College. A seasoned educator, she also teaches the Professional Development course for an Erasmus+ Program in Rome, Italy. Dr. Contrada writes about intersections between history and popular culture. Always eager to get more people interested in history, this year she has stepped outside of the academia to write and record a podcast called Christory: History Where you Least Expect it.

YLENIA DE LUCA

Ylenia De Luca is an Associate Professor of French Literature at the University of Bari Aldo Moro. She is interested in 20th and 21st century Canadian French poetry and 20th century French poetry, as well as contemporary Francophone literature and gender studies. She has published four volumes and numerous essays on these issues in national and international magazines. She is also the editor-in-chief of the review, Echo-Interdisciplinary Journal of Communication, Languages, Cultures, Societies.

VINCENZA IADEVAIA

Vincenza Iadevaia holds a PhD in Comparative Studies from Florida Atlantic University. In 2020, in collaboration with the Department of Linguistics at Boğaziçi University, Turkey, Iadevaia produced a documentary based on interviews and life testimonies of elderly deaf people (We were there ... we are here) as part of the Sign-Hub Project which was funded by the European Commission (Horizon, 2020). Her research interests focus on Italian diaspora studies. She is also interested in documentary and ethnography. Currently, she is developing two documentary projects (on the Italian community in South Florida and on Nomad Women in South Turkey). Iadevaia has worked for several Italian film productions. Her experience in the film industry complements her academic strengths, letting her integrate the practical and theoretical aspects of films. She teaches Italian as a foreign language and Italian Cinema (previously at the University of Connecticut and at FAU, currently at Boğaziçi University).

GIANNINA A. LUCANTONI

Giannina A. Lucantoni completed her doctoral research at SUNY, Buffalo in 2022. Her areas of expertise include Italian American author Pietro di Donato, and twentieth-century Italian American literature. In addition to teaching adjunct at the university level and conducting research as an independent scholar, Dr. Lucantoni teaches high school English.

STEFANO LUCONI

Stefano Luconi teaches US History at the University of Padua in Italy. He specializes in Italian migrations to the United States with specific attention to Italian Americans' political experience and transformations of their ethnic identity. On these topics, he wrote From Paesani to White Ethnics: The Italian Experience in Philadelphia (SUNY P, 2001) and The Italian-American Vote in Providence, Rhode Island, 1916-1948 (Fairleigh Dickinson UP, 2004). His most recent book is L'anima nera degli Stati Uniti: Gli afro-americani e il difficile cammino verso l'eguaglianza, 1619-2023 (Cleup, 2023).

ELISABETTA MARINO

Elisabetta Marino is Associate Professor of English literature at the University of Rome Tor Vergata and head of “Asia and the West” research center. She is the author of four monographs: a volume on the figure of Tamerlane in British and American literature (2000); an introduction to British Bangladeshi literature (2005); a study on the relationship between Mary Shelley and Italy (2011); an analysis of the Romantic dramas on mythological subjects (2016). In 2006, she published the first Italian translation of poems by Maria Mazziotti Gillan. Between 2001 and 2023 she has edited/co-edited fifteen collections of essays (three more are forthcoming) and a Special Forum of Journal of Transnational American Studies (2012). In 2022, she translated Parkwater, a Victorian novel by Ellen Wood, for the first time into Italian. She co-edited a special issue of De-Genere: Journal of Postcolonial, Literary and Gender Studies (2022).

GIULIA TARANTINO

Giulia Tarantino grew up in Soverato, in the South of Italy, and spent several years studying in Rome. In 2018, she decided to move to Orlando, Florida, where she spent one year working. This experience, in conjunction with the study of Anglo-American literature, aroused a passionate interest in the Italian American condition on which she decided to focus her research project. Upon graduating from the University of Rome Tor Vergata, fascinated by the academic world, she felt the urge to further explore the literary field. Having realized the importance of the teachers' role in her life path, she decided to pursue a career as a professor. In 2021, she obtained the tenure for one year as teacher of English Language and Literature at the institute “Maria Ausiliatrice” in Soverato.
