

From The Editor

Dear Readers and Colleagues,

It is great pleasure to present the new issue of the Journal of Entrepreneurship and Innovation Management. In every issue, we are receiving very good numbers of papers from researchers in the field of innovation, entrepreneurship and other related subjects. We are thankful for those who supporting us either by sending papers or reviewing the papers. Without those support it would not be possible to bring the Journal to this level.

In this new issue, we have a very well addressed four research papers from different topics of the entrepreneurship and technoparks, globalization and entrepreneurship, logistics, and innovation project management. We hope this issue will also provide useful information both researchers, professionals as well as it will also provide useful information for policy makers.

Finally, I like to remind you that you can access all our past and current issues with no charge. I strongly recommend you to read our publications and I believe this will be helpful for your current research and professional business. By using this opportunity, I wish you a very nice summer holiday.

Best Regards,
