

Contributors to the Current Issue

Anna Maria Karczewska (ORCID: 0000-0002-8644-4723) is a graduate in English Philology at the University of Białystok where she teaches at the Center for Literary Studies. She has a Ph.D. in cultural studies from the University of Social Sciences and Humanities (SWPS) in Warsaw. She has written a monograph New Journalism as a Window onto the 1960s Counterculture (2017). She has also published articles on the works of Edwidge Danticat and articles related to Latin American culture and literature. Her current research interests revolve around Latin American culture and Latin American literature in the United States.

Aroa Orrequia-Barea graduated in English Philology at the University of Cádiz in 2011, where she also got her PhD in English Philology in 2017 with a thesis on attitude verbs and clause embedding. She previously worked as a research assistant at the Institute for Research in Applied Linguistics at the University of Cádiz. She currently works as a supply teacher at the University of Jaén, where she teaches a number of courses in the English Studies Degree and in the Online Master of English Studies (OMiES). Her research interests include Digital Humanities, particularly Corpus and Computational Linguistics.

Banjo Olaleye is an Academic Advisor at the University of Saskatchewan, Canada where he is also currently completing his Ph.D. program in English. He holds an MA in English from the same university and a BA in English and International Studies from Osun State University, Nigeria. His dissertation focuses on a social reading of space and identity in eighteenth-century London through the perspective of Ignatius Sancho.

Encarnación Almazán-Ruiz holds a PhD in English Linguistics from University of Granada since 2005. She obtained teaching experience in various centres of Secondary Education and working as a freelance teacher with secondary, university and adult students. She is currently a member of the Department of English Philology at the University of Jaén, teaching a number of courses in the English Studies Degree and in the Online Master of English Studies (OMiES). Her research interests include Corpus Linguistics and the possibilities of different and innovative teaching approaches in the classroom.

Hasan Baktır received his MA in English Language and Literature and his PhD in English literature. He previously worked as a research assistant in the Department of Foreign Language Education at Middle East Technical University. He completed his postdoctoral research at Minnesota University, English Department. Currently he works at Erciyes University, English Language and Literature Department. His research interests include Orientalism, comparative literature and early modern Anglo-Ottoman interactions.

Hüseyin Altındış is an Assistant Professor of English at Selcuk University, Turkey. He is a Fulbright Scholar and received his Ph.D. from the University of Arkansas in 2015 with his dissertation on Immigrant Labor in Contemporary Southern Literature. His research interests are Southern literature, African American literature, Globalization and Multiculturalism, Ecocriticism, Modern American Novel, and Ethnic American literature. He has published a number of articles and book chapters and presents at CEA conferences in the USA regularly. He received several awards and fellowships.

Kuğu Tekin has been an Assistant Professor at Atılım university since 2001, specializing in postcolonial literature, migration literature and city studies. She has completed her PhD studies at Middle East Technical University. Courses designed and taught by Dr. Tekin include Literature and the City, Humour in British Film and TV Series, Film Studies and 20th century and Contemporary Novel. Her research appeared in both national and international peer-reviewed publications such as Wasafiri in the U.K., Arcadia in Germany, Folklore and Literature in Cyprus, Uludağ University Journal of Humanities and Social Sciences in Turkey.

Magdalena Płotała is a PhD candidate at the Faculty of Literary Studies at University of Silesia in Katowice, Poland. Her interests are focusing around the theory of literature, especially in terms of affective reading, reader-response criticism, theory of influence (and contr-theories), minority and queer studies. She is also interested in reading literature with the tools provided by modern archiving (affective archives). Her research is mainly about Polish writers from 20th century. She is publishing in journals from the field of philology and taking part in international conferences about exclusion and literature.

Nodhar Hammami Ben Fradj is an Assistant Professor of English and researcher in the English Department at the Faculty of Arts and Humanities of Kairouan, University of Kairouan, Tunisia. She holds a PhD in English language and literature. She specializes in American literature and feminist literary criticism. Her research interests are gender studies, nineteenth-century American literature, Afro-American literature, Anglo-American and French feminisms, cultural studies and critical theory. She is on the reviewing boards of academic journals like The International Journal of Humanities and Cultural Studies, The Letters of Kairouan, Modawana Journal, and other conference proceedings and books. She contributed to national and international conferences and published numerous articles in scholarly journals, proceedings and compilations.

Samuel O. Okafor is a PhD student in the department of Sociology/Anthropology, University of Nigeria, Nsukka. He is a promising scholar with multi methodological research skills in the areas of social sciences and humanities. His research interests include political sociology, policy studies, demography, medical sociology and environmental studies. He has published a number of articles, books and book chapters and has presented research papers in number of international conferences and workshops.

Sıla Şenlen Güvenç is currently Associate Professor in the Department of English Language and Literature at Ankara University. Her research interests include Early Modern English Drama, Twentieth Century and Contemporary British Drama. She is the author of two books, 'Words as Swords': Verbal Violence as a Construction of Authority in Renaissance and Contemporary English Drama (2009) and 'The World is a Stage, but the Play is Badly Cast': British Political Satire in the Neo-Classical Period (in Turkish, 2014), and various articles published in journals including Scottish Literary Review and New Theatre Quarterly.

Yasemin Ayan graduated from English Language and Literature Department at Erciyes University. She completed her MA in English Language and Literature Program. She works as English teacher.