

Editor's Note

Dear Readers,

We are excited to be with you again in our sixth issue. We left three years behind in our press life. During this time, our journal successfully continued to be released at its due time. We believe that this journal reflects not only promptitude and preciseness but also a scientific approach and standing. The impact of our loyalty to principles and preciseness shows itself in the increase of our popularity. In this respect, it seems that we have surpassed significant obstacles in our way. Our strict loyalty to academic and scientific rules & principles in academic journalism has drawn attention of important academic databases. That attention gave our journal a widespread audience and presence in databases.

The development that our journal has undergone confronts us with a pleasant challenge. The number of submitted articles increases day by day. Given that we can publish only eight articles, there are lots of unpublished article due to lack of space even though they are approved by our reviewers. These articles are arranged according to their submittal date and they are published in next issues.

Dear "Journal of Social Sciences" readers,

This issue consists of eight articles and two book reviews. I acknowledge all researchers and scholars who submitted their articles and reviews, our reviewers who gave their precious time for this task, members of the editorial board of journal and all contributors. With warmest regards.
