

Editorial

The Journal of Experimental Medicine provides numerous scientific reports to its readers for nearly 39 years. The main objective of the journal has published high quality works without interruption; I regret to inform you that the publication process of the journal had been delayed for a short period of time due to some technical problems. With the happiness of taking over again, I would like to give good news to our readers that publication process starts again with this issue. My sincere gratitude to all authors who submitted their nice and high quality work for publication in the journal, and thanks to the reviewers of journal for their contributions during evaluation processes and thanks to technical staff of the journal and also thanks to the dean of medical faculty for his unlimited support to the journal.
