

Article Processing Finance (APF)

E-International Journal of Educational Research (E-IJER) is an initiative to provide a qualified publishing platform for both practitioners in any educational institution and researchers. All articles are published after the peer review of qualified researchers. All articles published in our journal are open access and free. We had a publishing life of about 10 years and the magazine came to this day with the contributions of both referees and magazine volunteers. However, as all concerned can guess, the sustainability of the magazine has started to become risky for two reasons. The first of these is that the referees refuse to review the article; they are delayed in their return even if they accept it, and they give poor quality feedback. The second is the cost of publishing and preparing the journal. For these reasons, we plan to collect the following financial support from the authors and continue the journal with this concept. All of our aim is to achieve quality sustainability.

We can explain this under the name of "Article Processing Finance" which we briefly call "APF": The APF covers all of publishing and reviewing services we provide. A protocol was signed with the Eduscience Academia (<http://www.eduscience.net/>) to carry out the process that will ensure the continuity of the journal. The APF covers all of publishing and reviewing services we provide. APF includes article production, summarizing, indexing, contacts, review's the services and the services of provision of online tools for editors, reviewers and authors. When your article is accepted by editorial as "can be sent to reviewers" the APF will be wanted from you. The details of the APF account will be sent to you after the editor's approval. APF can only be paid by means of Drawing, Online Banking, Wire Transfer and Deposit Account. If the author or the referee's denial withdraws the article after APF payment, there will be no refund.
