

Call for Papers: Gender Equality and Development

We are pleased to announce a call for papers for a forthcoming issue on Gender Equality and Development, to be published in Izmir Democracy

University Social Sciences Journal. This issue will consider the multidimensional relationship between gender equality and socio-economic development, with particular emphasis on key challenges to be addressed, innovative solutions, and trends that are now beginning in both research and practice.

Themes and Topics of Interest

We welcome submissions from a variety of disciplines, including but not limited to:

- Gender-responsive economic policies and inclusive development strategies
- Women's empowerment and leadership in socio-economic contexts
- The role of education, health, and labour markets in promoting gender equality
- Intersectionality and its consequences for economic and social outcomes
- Gender and climate change adaptation strategies
- Legal and institutional frameworks that promote gender parity
- Feminist perspectives on sustainable development
- Technological advancements and their implications for gender equality

Submission Guidelines

We welcome original research articles, theoretical papers, case studies, and reviews of policies that offer new insights in the field. Submissions shall be based on rigorous analysis and have clear methodological approaches with practical or theoretical implications that can inform action to promote gender equality and development.
